A high-contrast black and white photograph. On the left, a two-story house with a gabled roof and a chimney is visible. The house has two windows with white frames. A path leads from the foreground towards the house. On the right side of the path, there is a large, leafy tree. In the background, a flagpole with an American flag is visible. The entire scene is framed by a dark, arched shape, possibly a doorway or a large archway. The text "SALEM 61" is overlaid at the bottom of the image.

FOREWORD

Another year of "Standing at the Portals" at opening chapel. Greetings from past students extended their best wishes for the year. The faculty surveyed the students and noticed a large block of new faces in the balcony and behind the first eight rows of mortar boards. '60-'61 had begun. Big decisions in the first few weeks: accepting and signing the Honor Tradition, contemplating whether or not to send that letter home saying, "I'm homesick. I just don't understand. Where do I go from here?" But by October, newness had disappeared: freshmen felt collegiate, although they knelt before seniors, and upperclassmen felt as though there had been no summer vacation. The leaves on the church were crimson; the weekend exodus for football games left the campus tranquil on Saturday afternoons. But it was still warm enough for one last barefooted run through the grass in front of Babcock or to sit behind Lehman drying hair. A few of the nature lovers suffered, though, and

sniffled on their

trek to the infirmary for a temperature-reading—pulse-taking diagnosis of aspirin and salt water gargle.

Politics and the "New Frontier" raised everyone's blood pressure. Bus loads of Salemites

—now really, who ever studied during Christmas? Then the same, only greater, rat race till the end of January with the same diet of stimulants. But those who wanted to make it back second semester did, by the grace of someone, for the confusion of registration and drop-add and procuring valuable books and lab manuals from Mr. Snavelly. Some skirts were much tighter than they had been in the fall—of course it was due to the chicken shortbread and the smothered "mystery meats" in the refectory and not the toasted pound cake with hot fudge sauce at the Barn. And sitting in the library all day working on a term paper didn't help the "spread" either. The large snows of last year stayed away, but the Friday and Saturday morning sleets were just enough to make everyone wonder if she would be able to get away or if he would be able to make it here. A few warm days brightened everyone's spirits and brought the dormies out for exciting events and male invaders from near and far on all kinds of week nights. Was that a car driving between Babcock and Strong? Who enjoyed Wake Forest's victory in the Garden more?—the twenty-five cars full that circled the Square or the six "fuzz" who sat in front of the library until two: Spring vacation and trips; the last lap, only seven more weeks to go. Studying was not so difficult when it could be done outside—unless someone or something was distracting nearby. Sunny days and warm nights and popcorn at the drive-in and some type of demonstration to release pent-up tensions and weeks going by all too quickly. The seniors lined up in caps and gowns again—this time for closing chapel—could it be closing time so soon? Firsts, fast. fun: that was and this is SALEM '61.

DEDICATION

A Chevy whirls around the Square and into a slot in front of Main Hall just as the 8:30 bell rings. Questions are asked from the edge of the desk, and the classroom in the round investigates the social and cultural aspects of history. A "dyed in the green" democrat pauses to cook supper for a class, mail Christmas cards to students, send a cake on opening night, and back for stimulation prefaced by "Actually" or "Well, quite frankly. . . ." Provoking thought and being thoughtful: never too busy for a conference over coffee and never still for a moment—only twenty-four hours in a day. But always there—when and where needed—constantly meeting the challenge and challenging others.

For this, the Class of '61 dedicates SALEM '61 to Dr. Inzer Byers.

Rain: what a logical welcome to Salem. Off with the high heels and on with the scarves and up to third floor Clewell or Babcock with ideas of liking everyone and loving the unknown roommate, and with a birage of steamer trunks and stereo sets to the minute room behind the door with "Salem '64" on it. The parents left, and the unscheduled orientation games began:

"And whom do you know from Davidson?" "Do you have a connection with the Zete's at Carolina?" "Will you teach me the Greek alphabet? I don't know a beta from a theta?" All the Wake were over, the returning upperclassmen had hugged everyone, the faculty per usual had outdone the students in their interpretation of baseball, groups were formed for renting post* office boxes; and, as soon as the fashion show was over, there was free time for the first time and a first date waiting back at the dorm. Cars were backed up to Blum Street; 11:30 came too soon; handbook study hadn't included what to do at the door; after all, he was a first date. Orientation week at last was over when the Y installed new members—the tra-

The activities of the Y, however, went beyond the traditional attempts to coordinate and encourage all campus religious activities: Becky extended the work of Sociology in order to provide opportunities for more Salem girls to write down names at the Bloodmobile, answer telephones at the Red Cross, send Christmas*
